

Punk and post-punk, the '80s was in the eye of

Madonna, NYC, 1982

Credit: Courtesy of the artist and Steven Kasher Gallery, New York

Laura Levine posed Madonna, the Clash, Afrika Bambaataa, Tina Weymouth, the DNA, the Ramones, Beastie Boys, Iggy Pop and many other musicians who have ridden the New York underground scene in the '80s and '90s. For this reason, the Steven Kasher Gallery in New York has chosen to tell the story of punk through his own shots. Photo editor of the New York Rocker , Laura Levine, who has followed in those years were in the forefront on stage rock, punk, indie rock, post-punk, hip-hop, New Wave and No Wave. He has exhibited his works in galleries of the East Village, like the Fun Gallery and the Gallery of Bridgewater, and the Museum of Modern Art has now decided for the first time to showcase some of his unpublished archive: 35 prints taken between 1976 and 1982. "Musicians" is the name of the exhibition, will be hosted by Steven Kasher Gallery in NYC from July 21 to August 19 - Adele Sarno

(July 14, 2011)

<http://espresso.repubblica.it/multimedia/home/30105430>